Q: How to specify a date range in a Oracle dateTime field? I would like to allow users to choose dates in a dateTime field and to query it based on a date range. For example, query all rows where the end date is between January 10, 2010 and February 21, 2011 For example, the following statement can be used to retrieve all rows where the end date is at least 1 year after the start date: select * from my_table where trunc(end_date) >= trunc(sysdate-interval '365 days') I would like to make it so the user is not limited to a 365-day window. Is there a way to tell oracle that the start date is between January 1, 2010 and February 1, 2011 for example, and that the end date is at least 1 year after the start date? A: If you want the data to always have a value, you should just ask for it to be null. Then you won't get unnecessary tuples created just for having a null value.

create table my_table ( id number primary key, start_date datetime not null, end_date datetime ); insert into my_table (start_date, end_date) values (date '2009-01-01', date '2025-01-01'); insert into my_table (start_date, end_date) values (date '2009-01-01', null); select * from my_table where end_date between sysdate - interval '365 day' and sysdate; select * from my_table where end_date is null; select * from my_table where trunc(start_date) = trunc(sysdate - interval '365 day'); dbfiddle
