Various suggestions have been made on how to include rodents into a lifetable for general use. We propose that a detailed description and evaluation of the biological background of the species should be included in the basis of a lifetable. We conclude that although inclusion of rodents in a lifetable is a complex task, the basis for inclusion should be the results of these investigations. It is recommended that a detailed description of the lifetable be published with results from genetic studies on this specific animal species.Determination of the binding constant of an anthracycline to calf thymus DNA by fluorescence microscopy. The in situ binding of adriamycin to calf thymus DNA was studied by fluorescence microscopy. A strong decrease in the fluorescence intensity of DNA was observed upon adsorption of the anticancer drug. The fluorescence intensity of the adsorbed DNA decreases with a decreasing concentration of free drug and saturation is reached at a drug concentration of about 10^{-5} M. The amount of bound drug is independent of the length of time of incubation. The extent of fluorescence quenching of the bound drug was quantified by measuring the rate of the intrinsic fluorescence recovery of the bound drug. It was found that the amount of bound drug is half of the total amount of drug present in solution at the same drug concentration. The binding constant was calculated to be 1.0×10^4 M⁻¹.Q: Does an included header file need to be included in the of the.m file it includes? Lets say I have two files: MyFile.h: #pragma once void MyFunction(); MyFile.m: #import "MyFile.h" void MyFunction(){...} Do I need to do something else in the header file (i.e. #import MyFile.h) to tell the compiler that it has an implementation in MyFile.m? A: No. You don't need to use #import in any special way. As long as you include the header, it will be

If i use android:duplicateParentState="true", it alligns perfectly, but if i scroll down, the listview items takes the "old" positioned item in the list. Is there a way to achieve this? A: i solved this problem using this approach. I create a Layout (containing 2 Drawables) for each row of the listview. And also I have a Spacer View to maintain an empty space in between the ListView and each row containing the layout. These are my files: list_row_item_row.xml
