It's 1492, the time of the Renaissance and the magnificent ruins of the Roman Empire once again await a new reign. You take on a role of one of 200 minor lords or kings from the time period. Be a minor noble in Ottomans court, an earl in Ireland, or Emperor of Byzantium, and rewrite history by fighting to preserve your empire, and prevent the spread of the Black Death across Europe. You bear the burden of leadership, and must decide how to keep your people safe. Act swiftly, using diplomacy or military might, but do not hesitate or the consequences will be dire. History has shown the critical importance of sound leadership in times of great crisis, even as we face these dangers now. Brutal Epic Battles Battles are truly epic - with several thousands units on all sides of battle. Bloody sieges, pitched field battles, and naval warfare unfolds with brutal historical realism and survival elements. When the battle is won, loot corpses or take apart towns to replenish your much needed resources. Enormous World Map The entirety of greater Europe and beyond is your playground - from the sultanates of North Africa to Byzantium, the Russian states and the Golden Horde, and all the Kingdoms of the Western and Central Europe. You can start the game as a minor noble with a small demesne or as a King ruling a great nation. There are dozens of Kingdoms for you to choose from and over 300 Lords and Kings whose role you can play. Redefining the Genre The Plague: Kingdom Wars is the first historical strategy game to feature a full scale pandemic, as well as the optional undead mode (free DLC coming this winter), with millions of infected and undead potentially roaming the world map. Gameplay is ever evolving from lordship or kingdom management, to fighting a pandemic. Battle the Plague The black death is here, and as it sweeps through your empire your focus will quickly shift from conquering your rivals to surviving the pandemic. Utilize primitive medieval medicine, quarantine your cities, cut trade with distant lands, whatever it takes to stem the tide of death. Millions of people across Europe will get infected and die, and very soon it's the human resources and not silver coins that will become the most sparse resource. From the makers of Medieval Kingdom Wars The Plague: Kingdom Wars builds upon the success of Medieval Kingdom Wars and takes things further. As we enter Early Access, however, almost everything has been redone from the

The emperor has chosen you to be his most loyal knight on a glorious mission that will pave a road to victory for mankind. Nobody can tell you anything about the upcoming tasks, but you should have no doubts: you will be doing a lot of talking...Medicare for all is alive. But it's dead. Not anymore. I'm speaking for no one but myself when I say this, but, from this point forward, the only thing I want to hear about from the Democrats is Medicare for all, Medicare for all. I'm done listening about a public option, a public option. I'm done listening about how Bernie is right and you're wrong. I'm done listening about expanding the Affordable Care Act. I'm done listening about Medicare for all. That's all I want to hear from the Democratic Party. We will go on from here. We are building our own. We are building our own. Anyway, I'm a Republican. I don't know how that works, but if there's a benefit to being a Republican, it's that you're rarely the victims of random out-of-context statements like this. But you can't force someone to say "Medicare for all, Medicare for all" if they don't want to, right? Oh yeah. That's right. When Republicans fall back on the argument that "We won't dare make any progress on health care reform until they're satisfied that 'Medicare for all'" is the one and only game in town. "We are building our own. We are building our own." Right. Because building your own is so much better than getting somebody else's money. "Here, everybody get your own cookie!" Medicare for all is not dead. That guy who wants to be the president is not going to keep it alive, but the rest of us can. There's a place for it, as long as we're careful to explain that we're building our own. Which would be great, if it weren't for the fact that people are trying to build their own even without the Democrats. At a signing ceremony for the New Paid Family Leave Act in the Senate
