Patch Free Download Full Version for Adobe Photoshop CS6The U.S. government is shutting down at midnight on Friday. A majority of the functions of the executive branch of the federal government have been suspended, pending action by Congress on the National Emergencies Act of 1976. According to U.S. Code, “an emergency created by war, or by immediate threat or danger of war, should not be a continuing one,” and accordingly, the emergencies decreed by President Obama have been sustained or extended by Congress and/or the courts, so far until January 20, 2017, the date of Obama’s successor. The federal government will come to an official and final stand in their mission to resist or uphold the legal basis on which the president has claimed authority to act unilaterally. The current national emergency was declared on December 29, 2015, and is based on a purported threat to the United States by the government of Iraq. The State of Florida and the National Rifle Association (NRA) are among the plaintiffs, challenging the lawfulness of this extension. According to the congressional review, the program, known as the 2012 “Defending America from Terrorism Act,” is “limited to the authority vested in the President by the International Emergency Economic Powers Act” (IEEPA), passed in 1977 to support national foreign policy. According to the president’s proclamation, the Iraqi government is “engaging in significant acts of violence against the United States and its coalition partners, posing an unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States.” The only “threat” to which Obama’s proclamation refers is the threat of U.S. retaliation against a government he considers illegitimate and internationally unrecognized. The decision to bomb Iraq in March 2003 to topple the government was taken without an adequate effort to distinguish between the regime of Saddam Hussein and the people of Iraq. The matter is made even more perplexing because Obama has declared that he is also invoking the authority of IEEPA, the extremely broad piece of legislation on which the proclamation is based. IEEPA is the legal basis for all of the government’s actions against Iran’s nuclear industry. It is based on the suspicion that Iran’s nuclear program is a threat to the security of the United States because of its
