Q: How can I programmatically get the list of classes used by a known class? One example use would be a system monitoring. Programatically get the list of classes that serve the following: List GetTheUnCalledClasses() Some code I found, but I cannot find a class that has this information in it. A: You're talking about reflection, but what you want to do is cause the type of T to have an attribute: public class Attribute[T] where T : new() { public Attribute(string propertyName) [...] } and then make a bunch of these in a dictionary: var types = typeof(int).Assembly.GetTypes().Where(t => !t.IsAbstract && !t.IsSealed && !t.IsNested).Where(t => !typeof(Attribute).IsAssignableFrom(t) && typeof(Attribute).IsAssignableFrom(t.BaseType)).Select(t => new Attribute(t.Name)); Now, you can get all the classes from each type T that were marked with an attribute of the specific type: var classes = from t in types.Where(t => t.GetTypeInfo().IsClass).Select(t => t.GetTypeInfo().BaseType).Where(t => typeof(Attribute).IsAssignableFrom(t)).ToArray(); Note that you must be careful with this. For example, don't store sensitive types this way. The safe approach is to use reflection on each class to get a reference to the attribute's property. This will only yield classes that actually have an attribute; class strings like string, string[], and so on will not work. Note also that I'm getting the type info by virtue of the fact that the types are not
