Catheter-associated urinary tract infection (CAUTI) is a major public health concern, with more than half of patients undergoing indwelling urinary catheterization in intensive care units (ICUs) acquiring at least one episode of such infection. In this retrospective observational study, we analysed the duration of catheterization, the duration of hospitalization, the number of CAUTIs acquired and the outcomes of 1898 cases of CAUTI treated in the Clalit Health Services hospital in central Israel during the three-year period from 2009 to 2011. After median follow-up of 8 days, 685 (36.4%) patients acquired one or more episodes of CAUTI, and 15 (0.8%) patients died. CAUTIs with single and multiple episodes occurred in 82% and 18.4% of cases, respectively. The mean duration of hospitalization was 10 days for each case, with more than 70% of the infections occurring during the first week of hospitalization. The majority of patients (72.8%) required antimicrobial treatment. The most common isolate was Escherichia coli. Of each case of CAUTI, 57.5% required additional catheter removal. When comparing patients with CAUTIs with a single episode to patients with multiple episodes, it is obvious that the latter group were more severely ill and significantly more likely to be intubated. Patient case managers can play a crucial role in limiting hospital-acquired infections.Conus rhombaspis Conus rhombaspis, common name the rhombased cone, is a species of sea snail, a marine gastropod mollusk in the family Conidae, the cone snails, cone shells or cones.
