Advanced Physics ∇Advanced Physics ωBy Phixion The Advanced Physics code can be used for any physics heavy game. ∇ Advanced Physics allows us to model objects and set them in a three dimensional position. ∇ Advanced Physics Introduction Advanced Physics is used to apply forces to objects in three dimensional space. In this case, we can model and fix the position of game objects and apply forces to them. This code allows us to make collisions, roll dice, apply tilt in mid-air and much more. Basic Newtonian Physics Features Coordinates The reason why Advanced Physics uses three dimensions is because its designed to simulate an infinite amount of screen coordinates. Instead of using an array, we set variables from 0 to 100. This means that no matter how many objects there are, the system will be able to make any object visible. In addition to being able to set coordinates on screen, the system can also apply gravity. In the following, we will go through the way we can set a gravity by using variables. This code can work on either axis, either on x or y. In this example, we will use x axis, but of course we can use y axis as well. Our gravity is going to be set to a fixed point, here let's say it's x = 0, y = 0 and z = -16, so the gravity is always going downwards. Declaring Gravity Let's declare our gravity first. We declare a variable called G_X, this is used to tell the system how strong the gravity is. The code we enter in here is -16, this makes the gravity fall downwards
