Language: EN-US Slideshow: OFF Status: ON Mark: OFF This is a dvd project with many pictures and some music. I'm a little bit happy that it's working. I tried it with my TV so my monitor only showed some random colours I don't have the DVD drive, though. What I want to know is how to make a similar video with it in a different folder? Thank you in advance! A: The project will create an.iso file on the DVD that you can use with your DVD player, but you need to have a DVD player that can read the.iso file. Using Gnomebaker (or K3B) you can convert a video (in your case) to an.iso and burn it. The.iso file is also known as a Virtual Drive. If you can not find a Free DVD player that can read the file, you can use Windows' DVD burner to burn your file.

Image copyright Reuters Image caption The authors of the report say the reams of paper produced at the border every day should be shredded and incinerated The US border is one of the biggest wastepickers in the world and produces 30 times the amount of paper used each day by the US government - more than the rest of the world combined, say scientists. Their report suggests the amount should be cut by a third to save the equivalent of 86m trees. The study's authors described the border as "a thriving industry of its own", referring to all the paperwork produced and shipped across. The Border Patrol says it has cracked down on such waste. Gillian Pease, of the Montana-based National Wildlife Research Center, said that because the border is so long and diverse, agencies and organisations are attempting to reduce the amount of waste they produce. "In general the Border Patrol is very good about trying to dispose of their paper properly," she said. "It is very common at a given office or in a given sector of the border to have three people working with paper all day."

But she said that just because you have no issues disposing of your waste, it doesn't mean you're not producing paper in the first place. "If you think about the factors that influence how much paper a sector produces, that is number one," she said. "Then, secondly, how well does that sector

Nvivo 10 .Q: How to avoid a div interfering with a div within I am working on a web application using html and css. I have 3 sections one with a class called first section and I have a div within first section and I also have a different class called second-section within first section. The problem is when I hover on the first section, the div of second section also get highlighted. I want the div of second-section to not get highlighted when I hover on first section. Does anyone have an idea on how to achieve this. A: You can use the :not() selector to remove :hover style from unwanted elements. The :not() selector is written as a universal selector, so it applies to any element not matching the selector. p:not(.arrow):hover { background-color: red; } p:not(.arrow) { background-color: red; } .arrow { background-color: blue; } My goal is to provide quality benefits for our policyholders.
