Wegener's granulomatosis. A rare disease with a complex multisystemic presentation. Wegener's granulomatosis is a systemic disease with an unknown etiology. Its course is usually characterized by three periods: prodromal, inflammatory, and postinflammatory. Among the most frequent and characteristic systemic features are nasal and paranasal sinus disease (rhinitis and/or rhinosinusitis), orbital disease (mucopurulent conjunctivitis, iritis, and proptosis), and, to a lesser degree, pulmonary involvement. Wegener's granulomatosis can be diagnosed histologically and on the basis of the findings from upper-airway, orbital, and pulmonary biopsies. The diagnosis is confirmed by typical histology of the biopsy specimen and, in some cases, by an elevated serum level of the antibody against neutrophil cytoplasmic antigen. The disease is treated with a combination of systemic (corticosteroids, cyclophosphamide, and methotrexate), local (intranasal, intraocular, or parental), and supportive measures, which usually caudactylidae (Amphibia: Anura) based on a partial sequence of the nuclear ribosomal RNA gene. A molecular phylogeny of the family Caudactylidae was inferred from a partial sequence of the nuclear ribosomal RNA gene. A molecular phylogeny of the congeneric Anodonta and Rhiella species, which are usually considered to be of South-American origin and to have diverged about 14.5-18.5 Myr ago. With respect to the Caudactylidae as a whole, the trees obtained with the different approaches used in this study are in accordance with the biogeographic history of the family.Q: If $5
