The purpose of this study is to examine drinking patterns among this population, including quantity and frequency of alcohol use, whether alcohol use is related to the circumstances of deployment, and the prevalence of alcohol-related problems among this population. As of December 31, 2008, over 30,000 service members deployed during the current conflict in Iraq and Afghanistan. Reports of alcohol use were down by 13% among service members this year compared to 2008; however, use was up by 5% for non- service members. Of the non-service members, 2% reported that they consume eight or more drinks at one sitting on a typical drinking occasion, while 2% reported drinking that much in the last 30 days. Overall, alcohol use among service members is not out of the ordinary, but binge drinking is commonplace. The proposed research project will draw upon the high response rate to follow-up data collection efforts in the funded grant (NIAAA 07-020). The project will be a prospective study in three phases: 1) development of reliable indicators of alcohol use among this population; 2) examination of patterns of alcohol use among this population; and 3) examination of possible explanatory factors for problematic drinking. Structured interviews with service members will provide reliable indicators of alcohol use, symptoms of alcohol-related problems, and reasons for continued drinking. A secondary source of data includes unit-level deployed deployment surveys on alcohol and drug use. In
