An experimental and computational study on the influence of trace Ni on the oxidation state of single vacancy in rhodium and palladium. The influence of trace Ni on the oxidation state of a single vacancy in the Rh and Pd lattice was investigated using electron energy loss spectroscopy, X-ray photoelectron spectroscopy and density functional theory, respectively. The results show that transition metals in the rhodium and palladium lattice reduce the stability of the vacancy in the both systems, which is consistent with the results of existing studies. A combined experimental and theoretical study on the Pd lattice was made in order to observe the influence of Ni on the structural stability, which indicates that, in the case of Ni as a dopant, the formation energy of the vacancy is almost independent of the concentration of Ni. However, Ni at the Rh lattice is more effective than at the Pd lattice, which demonstrates the effect of transition metal on the vacancy's reactivity. Density functional theory calculations show that doping Ni in Rh and Pd may reduce the formation energy of the single vacancy, which is attributed to the Ni-induced local strain.This project is an improvement to the well-known "Pointer

It has been said that the witch's power can be found in the mysterious house near the village. A witch lived there until recently... In a first of its kind, the entire game has been set in one part of the house! True to the tale of H.P. Lovecraft, there is plenty of gore and blood in this title with the undertones of suspense and terror. In the eyes of the witch, the village has fallen under her spell... 3D Real-Time Spatial Audio: The Witches House is an adventure that is crafted to produce a full 3D experience in your favorite 3D display. Real-Time Spatial Audio is a feature that has been previously used to great success for adventure titles such as Myst. The experience is designed to be as immersive as possible to trigger horror and a sense of tension. Classic and modern horror elements: This adventure presents a story filled with classic and modern horror elements, from the ethereal and dark atmosphere of the house, to the understanding of the narrative and character development. Experience the story in 3D: Experience the story of The Witch's House in 3D, whether on an HD TV, in a computer monitor or on a 3D display for a truly immersive experience. A mood-setting soundtrack: Having a piece of music that is evocative of the emotion and atmosphere of a particular scene adds to the overall experience of the story. The Witch's House features a mood-setting score, perfect to create the right atmosphere. * Game/storybook text and voice-overs are in English (all languages available are optional). The full 3D experience is optimized for a wide range of 3D displays The original soundtrack is for English versions and does not include the language selection. The map system is able to accommodate screenshots from a wide range of devices So as you can see The Witch's House MV offers an amazing 3D experience and a sense of tension and horror. We are going to be releasing more information about this title in the coming weeks. So if you feel like taking a step into the unknown and see if you can catch the evil witch herself then we suggest you visit TheWitchHouseMV.com and keep an eye out for the release. =============================== - The "Village of Zombies - Tropical" does not allow you to walk around freely. The enemies have much stronger attack power, and more of them are also present. - During the co-op on the Ilsi server, you can play in both horde and instance mode (commando and ctf) in co-op. - You must keep an eye on the display, so that you can also make use of the secondary weapons. During the missions you will have to use an additional weapon. - The more players that play, the better your chance of getting a winning time. A winning time is based on every minute: if you complete a mission before the time is up, you can play for another minute. Here you are competing with all other players in the online co-op. If you win, the game will restart for you. With friends, you must complete the first mission in time to get a third, then send the time again. The campaign will end after 5 times, unless all players can complete the final mission before the campaign ends. When you lose, you can send the time up to four times. If you lose again in the 4th attempt, the game will be over. You can send the time back up to 1. You can use the score from a previous attempt, but not for your final attempt. With the "horde" mode (2-6 players), you can start a mission with many zombies, but there must be fewer than half of the total, if you want to win your time. You must, however, complete the mission in time. If the mission is lost, then you can not send the time for this mission. NOTE: You can return to the mission, but you can not send the time for the next mission. In "commando", you start with a group of 6 zombies, the number of which may be changed from 1 to 8. You must kill all of them with your secondary weapon. After you succeed with this, the mission is over. If you have difficulty, you can use the first person to kill them faster. "Instance" is the same as "commando", but the zombies are spread out and they will all start at the same time. You must also complete the mission in time. If the mission is lost, then you can not send the time for this mission. When you lose, you can send the time up to three times. If you lose

What's new:

India Games 2011 resumed after a three month break with Gold, Silver and Bronze medals going to the top 3 competitors. Over 800 athletes from across the country participated in the 9th edition of the Indian Archery Championships to be held at Pune, Maharashtra this weekend. Among the participants were relatives of athletes competing in the Rio Olympics, including competitors from the sub-continent who were competing against athletes with whom they have grown up admiring. A 17 year old Kansi, son of legendary archery coach Venkat 'KK' Kumar is one such participant. KK is one of the greatest archery coaches the country has ever seen. He is also a legend in the circles of his family. While the archery had its roots in ancient India, it would look at different do's and dont's of archery over the years. Ancient Indian archers were masters in the art of 'Vritti' or swift rotation of the wrist. This was essential for repeated shots. Without it, the archers would hit the broad side of the bow and produce a 'plump' target and would hit the 'round' target. Getting 'plump' target would suggest that the shot is off to the left or right. Over time, archers combined the movements of wrist draw to the release to produce much more accurate shots from all directions. This 21 year old Harakansi, son of superstar archer Ramesh Kumar was the first in that line. He is a student of engineering. He is also the budding genius in his own right, having a knack for Mathematics. He is equally at home on the field or the mat. He has a flamboyant personality and he is a glutton for competition. He is a man on a mission and age is just a number. After extended practice throughout his younger years, Harakansi recently entered India's National Archery Championships. However, the competitor in one segment of the tournament has the same practice of practising with a bow and arrows that has been crafted using his father's design, his father's bow, to the extent that he can actually compete against his father. This builds an immense amount of pressure on a human being. His father sells the bow itself for over 20,000 dollars. Harakansi won the gold medal in the men's category. His father likes to keep him in check. While he is the only competitor in
