In order to be useful for these varied purposes, AutoCAD has a wide range of features that allow you to customize the software to fit your needs, and to automate any repetitive tasks. The two major types of drawings created by AutoCAD are 2D drawings, which are drawings based on plans, sections, or elevations, and 3D drawings, which are based on a 3D model. In addition to these drawing types, you can also make a number of other kinds of drawings, including maquettes, documents (documents, notepads, and slide presentations), paper mockups, and technical drawings. A number of features are common to all three of the major AutoCAD products, as well as the other products in the Autodesk portfolio.
