Bitcoin isn't what it used to be. Just as the value of a coin or token can radically shift in a single day, what was once a purely technical or social curiosity has become a powerful financial tool. It's equally true that Bitcoin's rise has coincided with the meteoric rise of the entire cryptocurrency space and the nascent world of blockchain. All this has certainly led to some well-founded questions about the future of this industry and how it will fare over the long term. But there's another aspect to the rise of Bitcoin and cryptocurrencies that's missing out on a lot of attention. It's about the communities that these projects are building in order to achieve their objectives. Read more: BitBank, a digital bank One of the more interesting initiatives to emerge in the world of decentralized finance is BitBank. Based in Argentina, it's one of many projects to emerge to make the process of sending and receiving money easier and more secure. BitBank users can send cryptocurrencies
